Hope for Women Civil Society Network

“Women-led CSO activity is a window for the capacity building of women civil society activists in Afghanistan”

Fatima Naimi, in response to successful completion of Women lead CSO training package

“ACEP training package for women-led CSOs was the only training package which guided and motivated me to establish the Women for Hope Network, which has now 54 civil society organizations and youth associations as members from six different provinces of Afghanistan” Fatima Naimi”.

Twenty three women-led civil society organizations are now able to effectively participate in policy making and analysis of gender specific legislation.

USAID Afghan Civic Engagement Program delivered a series of trainings to 23 women-led civil society organizations across Afghanistan in the areas of research, gender integration, advocacy, communication and networking.

New Message for Afghan Women Organization (NAMWO) from Daikundi is one of the women-led organizations that participated in these trainings.

The training inspired Dr. Fatima Naimi, Director of NAMWO. She established a civil society network Hope for Women Networking February 2015. Fifty four civil society organizations and youth associations from Kabul, Ghazni, Bamyan, Daikondi, Herat and Ghor provinces have joined the network.

“ACEP training package for women-led CSOs guided and motivated me to establish the Women for Hope Network. It now has 54 civil society organizations and youth associations as members from six different provinces of Afghanistan,” said Mrs. Naimi.
